KANEOHE — “There’s a feeling I get, when I look to the West and my spirit is crying for leaving. In my thoughts, I have seen rings of smoke through the trees, and the voices of those who stand looking.”

Though the immortal words penned by legendary British rock group Led Zeppelin (in the song “Stairway to Heaven”) are about a mythical staircase bought by a mysterious lady, they still invoke a mood of ethereal beauty and grandeur that applies to the Haiku Staircase, or “Stairway to Heaven,” in Kaneohe’s Haiku Valley.

The “smoke through the trees” is the serpentine mists that envelope the Koolau Mountain Range, and the “voices of those who stand looking” is the echoes of the adventurous few who have made the accent up the 3,922 steps and remark at the beautiful vista found there.

On Sept. 25, Marines from G-1, Marine Forces Pacific, Camp H.M. Smith, became some of the first visitors to the stairs, up Pu’u Keahiakahoe, since their restoration earlier this year.

“The climb was difficult, but definite-

“The climb is no joke.”

Sgt. Tonya Longbine
Security NCO, G-1, Marine Forces Pacific

ly manageable — and rewarding,” said Cpl. Jacob Isberner, a Security noncommissioned officer. “The view was magnificent. The whole experience — in a word — incredible!”

The staircase, first erected in 1943, was built by the Navy to reach the cable facilities at their peak, for maintenance and repairs. Officials wanted to establish the means to make a signal that could reach as far as Australia, in preparation for a long Pacific conflict.

In 1955, the existing wooden stairs were replaced by a segmented, galvanized steel staircase. Though abandoned by the Navy in 1957, the site was taken over 15 years later by the Coast Guard, as a site for the Omega long-range radio navigational system.

Since then, however, the ravaging effects of wind, water, and time had damaged the staircase to the point of closing in 1987.

Prohibiting the public from accessing the stairs did little to keep out curious adventurers. Trespassing was a common problem. However, because of vocal residents such as the nonprofit Friends of Haiku Stairs, the stairs are now back to pristine condition and will soon be open to the general public.

“Compared to the first time I climbed the stairs, they look brand new and appear much safer,” said Sgt. Tonya Longbine, G-1 security noncommissioned officer-in-charge.

Though the staircase is indeed much safer, the peak of the site is measured at 2,820 feet and remains a challenge to ascend.

“The climb is no joke. You should definitely think about how steep the stairs are before you begin,” explained Longbine. “As long as you take your time, though, it shouldn’t be too difficult.”

Fellow hiker, Master Sgt. Patrick Buckley, career planner for MarForPac, agreed. “The condition of the staircase seemed very safe. Hikers should definitely bring plenty of water, though. It’s a long climb, and in the afternoon sun, you’ll be glad you brought it.”

Despite the workout to get to the peak, the visual splendors are worth every drop of sweat. A panoramic view of the Windward and Leeward Coasts rewards the tenacious few who make it to the top of the stairs. For many, they will find a sight that’s both exhilarating and inspirational.

“As a career-planner, I’m always looking for those who want to re-enlist,” Buckley explained, with a twinkle in his eye. “I can’t wait to find someone who wants to re-enlist up there. It’s picturesque, awe-inspiring and definitely motivating.”

Journey concert to double as a Toys for Tots drive

Press Release
Hawaii Marine Staff

Classic rock legends Journey will be performing at the Neal Blaisdell Arena Oct. 10 and 11, after a 15-year absence from Hawaii. Not only will their shows provide great music for the audience, but also they will provide a chance for concert goers to donate to a worthwhile charity.

Journey is best known for its rock songs that cluttered the airwaves throughout the 80s, with such hits as “After the Fall,” “Anyway You Want It,” and “Faithfully.”

Throughout the band’s reign, members have always been strong advocates for America’s children.

Journey’s official charity,

The Bright Star Foundation, has partnered with the Marine Corps’ Toys for Tots program, to collect toys and raise money for Hawaii’s children.

Toys for Tots will set up a booth outside the arena to allow patrons the opportunity to give unopened toys and monetary donations.

With each donation, Journey fans will receive a raffle ticket that could win autographed band memorabilia.

Booths will open each night at 5 p.m.

Service members urged to vote absentee

Some remaining voter registration deadlines creep up this Monday

WASHINGTON — Stateside and overseas service members, as well as U.S. civilians overseas, should now be requesting absentee ballots in order to vote in the November general election, the Department of Defense's senior voting official urged recently.

State voter registration deadlines are nearing, and absentee voters need to obtain and send in their Federal Post Card Application forms to register to vote, said Polli Brunelli, director of DoD's Federal Voting Assistance Program.

United States civilians and military members living overseas should submit voter registration forms so that local election officials receive them by Monday.

"If you want to vote, you need to register now, if you haven't done it already," Brunelli said.

Overseas voters should return their filled-out absentee ballots by Oct. 15 to ensure that local election officials receive them in time, she said.

Overseas voters should use the Federal Write-In Absentee Ballot, if their requested state absentee ballot does not arrive in time to allow voters to return it by the state deadline for counting, Brunelli pointed out.

The November election, she noted, involves about a third of the Senate, the entire House of Representatives, 37 state governors, and thousands of local races.

It's important that absentee voters sign and date the ballot return envelope, Brunelli said. Some states, she added, require that the envelope be postmarked, witnessed or notarized.

Military members with questions on absentee voting requirements should see their unit voting assistance officer.

Information can also be obtained by reading your state registration and voting procedures in the Voting Assistance Guide on the Federal Voting Assistance Program Web site at www.fvap.gov.
